2017 Planning for Governmental Retirement Plan Operations

The calendar provided in this FYI In-Depth will help sponsors of governmental retirement plans that are exempt from many ERISA requirements set up a schedule of activities to address as the year progresses so that important deadlines for qualified public-sector plans are met. As you evaluate the various tasks, you can confirm suitable deadlines with your vendors for their completion. As you make your plans, there are a number of key issues for you to consider as we head into 2017.

Review of Plan Administration

In addition to verifying that routine tasks are monitored in accordance with plan terms and administrative policies — such as making required minimum distributions — administrators must be on the alert for some not-so-common tasks. Here are some key areas to watch:

Remind participants of any opportunity to name beneficiaries.

Many plan administrators have had to sort out competing claims for death benefits because of unclear or missing beneficiary designations. These disputes can sometimes result in costly litigation. Most plans make a participant's spouse the default beneficiary. If the plan offers a choice, and a participant wants plan benefits diverted to someone else, such as children, parents or a favorite charity, a properly executed beneficiary designation is the ticket. Make a point of reminding plan participants to update their beneficiary designations.

Identify lost participants with vested benefits. Returned plan notices, statements or distribution checks should be researched timely to identify lost participants. The sooner the search is started, the more likely that a terminated participant whose address has changed can be located. Funds covering any check that remains outstanding for a significant period should be redeployed to the trust or, depending on the amount, rolled into an IRA. Adjustments will be needed to address any income tax that had been withheld.

The fact that fewer notices to participants are mandated for governmental retirement plans than for private-sector plans sometimes leads governmental plans to be somewhat passive in maintaining ongoing communications with participants who have terminated with vested benefits. If your plan does not regularly reach out to these participants, we encourage you to begin sending them reminders of their entitlement to benefits and the processes for claiming them. Failure by participants to begin receiving benefits before attaining certain ages can lead to a number of adverse outcomes, including tax penalties for affected participants and negative publicity for retirement systems that effectively allow participants to inadvertently forego receipt of benefits they have earned.

Address foreign asset reporting obligations. In an effort to address tax evasion, money laundering, and terrorist financing concerns, compliance requirements mandate reporting of assets held by foreign financial institutions (including retirement plans) and benefit distributions to certain individuals. Plan fiduciaries will want to assess compliance with these requirements, particularly the Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA), the Report of Foreign Bank and Financial Accounts (FBAR), and regulations issued by Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC). Our June 12, 2014 For Your Information outlines these requirements.

Review and analyze insurance coverage. Insurance can be purchased to protect fiduciaries and the plan against liability or losses occurring due to a plan fiduciary's act or omission. Fiduciaries can be personally liable for losses incurred by a plan due to their breach; insurance can cover some of those losses.

It is important to analyze the policy's major defined terms to understand exactly what risks it covers. Furthermore, understanding when these policies are triggered is crucial to understanding whether the plan and its trustees and staff will be adequately protected. An annual review of these policies may illuminate the requirement to report certain events to the insurer within a specific time frame to collect on a claim.

Comment: Many policies cover the penalties imposed by the IRS under a Voluntary Correction Program, but require timely notification to the insurer.

Plan Amendments, Filings and Documentation

Do your plan's governing documents correctly describe the plan provisions as intended, and are any summaries provided to plan participants and administrative procedures in sync with the official documents?

Key Point. Many governmental employers find that adding specificity to their documents improves the clarity of plan terms and consistency of administration. This helps to eliminate the need for case-by-case determinations for unusual situations and helps to mitigate litigation risk.

Evaluate the need for plan amendments – and deadlines. IRS procedures call for executing discretionary amendments by the end of the plan year and provide extended amendment periods for modifications necessary to address changes in legal requirements. Governmental plans are also allowed an extended period for adoption through 90 days after the last day of the second regular legislative session beginning after the amendment's effective date in which the governing body with authority to amend the plan can consider the amendment under the laws and procedures applicable to the governing body's deliberations.

Normal retirement age. IRS has proposed regulations on normal retirement age (NRA) specific to governmental plans that would allow for an NRA based on years of service — both instead of, and in conjunction with, age. The proposed rules also set forth safe harbors on NRA that are available only to governmental plans that address many of the concerns governmental plan sponsors expressed in response to the 2007 NRA regulations. While governmental employers should review their plan terms in light of the proposal, it is expected that most would be able to keep their current NRA definitions intact under these rules. Details are in our February 16, 2016 For Your Information.

Cash balance and other hybrid plans. Although governmental plans are exempt from the Code sections that were amended in the Pension Protection Act of 2006 to address age discrimination for private plans, there are comparable changes that were made to ADEA that may need to be considered. For example, a DROP account could be considered a form of cash balance account. The interest crediting rate under the plan may not be the only issue that requires attention. Many plans need to adjust other provisions, such as lookback periods, early and late retirement factors, and plan termination rules.

If you missed making required amendments, consider IRS' correction program. Until January 1, 2017, the applicable fee for a Voluntary Correction Program (VCP) submission that addresses only a failure to amend a plan in a timely manner is reduced by 50 percent if it is made within one year after the expiration of the amendment deadline. Starting in 2017, IRS will announce the VCP fees and associated rules in its annual Revenue Procedure for written determinations issued each January. We expect that IRS will continue to offer discounted VCP fees when sponsors voluntarily correct plan document failures within a short time after the deadline (such as one year) and prior to audit. Our October 21, 2016 For Your Information provides an update on the most recent changes.

Service Providers Need to Know

Have you provided your actuary, consultant, TPA, etc. with copies of current signed documents? Your service providers need up-to-date information about you and your plans to be able to spot issues and assure quality service. Make sure to keep them in the loop!

Assemble and maintain documentation of transactions with participants. Proper administration of plans as they are currently written is key — but don't toss old documents. Be sure to create and maintain records of participant data, such as proof of benefit distributions, benefit elections, and beneficiary designations, which may be priceless when participants terminated from service decades ago question whether or not payment had been made. There's a reason ERISA includes document retention obligations for plans — being exempt from those requirements doesn't mean there isn't value in voluntarily adopting them.

Communicating with Your Actuary

2017 offers an opportunity to discuss rational funding expectations. With the replacement of GASB 25 and 27 by GASB 67 and 68, the long-time primary guideposts for governmental plan funding policy have disappeared. Moreover, GASB's new standards require projections of the extent to which a system's funding policy will result in the accumulation of sufficient assets to pay benefits in future years, so for multiple reasons the new standard provides a strong incentive to revisit funding policies if such a review has not already been undertaken.

Consider mortality and other assumptions. Without a doubt, your plan population is living longer and the cost of defined benefit plans will generally increase over time as a result. At some point, these mortality improvements will be reflected in updated mortality tables used by your actuary to estimate plan costs. It may be worth considering whether a revision of annuitant mortality assumptions is in order now. Plan trustees may wish to address this matter in advance of the next regularly scheduled experience study; at minimum, it would be advisable to know the likely impact of adopting a modernized mortality assumption.

Plan trustees and their actuaries will also want to consider changes in other assumptions, which may counterbalance the impact of mortality improvements. In response to longer life expectancy and the longer period of time for making retirement savings stretch, many employees are planning to continue working beyond the plan's "normal" retirement date. Aligning plan retirement assumptions with this new paradigm can reduce plan liabilities, particularly for retiree medical plans and pension plans with suspension of benefits provisions and generous early retirement subsidies. On the other hand, it can also boost liabilities for a plan that provides generous actuarial increases to those electing late retirement.

Governmental plans face a fundamentally different set of choices for de-risking, but by making appropriate choices in plan design, funding policy and investment policy, a public-sector retirement system can greatly reduce volatility in funding requirements and GASB reporting outcomes.

Defined Contribution Plan Design Changes

If you share the concern that your employees may not have sufficient funds to last through retirement, the timing may be right to consider new provisions such as auto-enrollment or auto-escalation to boost participant savings rates. You may also consider adding annuities to your retirement plans now that the IRS has made it easier to do so. The IRS issued final regulations on qualifying longevity annuity contracts which, if properly structured, enable a participant to start payments at an advanced age — as late as 85 — and exclude the value of the annuity from required minimum distribution calculations. Our July 10, 2014 For Your Information explains the option.

In Closing

Planning with trusted advisors to identify tasks and set compliance goals for the coming year is an important first step for assuring smooth operations during 2017. In addition to the key items noted above, plan sponsors may want to perform an annual "checkup" (i.e., a review of operational practices and fiduciary responsibilities) to address plan expenses, design considerations, and investments. Plan sponsors may elect to conduct their own self-audit or contract with an independent party. Regardless of who performs the audit, identifying problems and initiating corrections in advance of any official agency audit is the preferred course of action.
